Taking a Stand Against Cyber-bullying

Wednesday, August 26, 2009 | 10:00am - 12:00pm PDT | At anywhere with internet access

A study conducted by CNN showed that 4 out of 5 middle school students had engaged in bullying behavior in the last 30 days.

WEBINAR

In order to understand Cyber-bullying, it is important to understand the constructs and definition of bullying. In March 2002, Senate Bill 5528 defined bullying as "An intentional written, verbal, or physical act against a student which is motivated by the bully's perception of that student's race, color, or creed, gender, sexual orientation, or other distinguishing characteristics... When the intentional act physically harms a student or damages his/her property; substantially interferes with the student's education; is so severe, persistent or pervasive that it creates an intimidating or threatening educational environment; or substantially disrupts the orderly operation of a school." The new legislation utilizes similar verbiage, but explicates and defines electronic devices, fitting new technological language into the bill.

Workshop Objectives:

The objective of this training is to assist participants in addressing cyber-bullying issues in their homes and/or in their schools.

In this presentation:

- An introduction to cyber-bullying including definitions, constructs and effects of such behaviors will be discussed.
- Tools for parents and educators to recognize and evaluate instances of cyber-bullying will be described.
- Tools for educators and parents to positively address and implement effective solutions and interventions for cyber-bullying behaviors will also be addressed.
