Education, Health and Human Services

Gain an in-depth overview of the K-12 education sector, and the public health and human service agencies serving the area. Their purpose, priorities, and future direction are discussed. During the day, resource people from various agencies in leadership positions make up panels to discuss issues affecting this important facet of community life.

Questions addressed include:

- How can you become involved?
- Who decides which services are needed?
- How much accountability should there be?
- What are the rights & responsibilities of children, families, and the community?
- Who decides & who pays?
- What are the alternatives?

K-12 funding and learning outcomes, mental health, social services, public health, health care, and aging will be addressed. Prior to this meeting, participants are asked to meet with K-12 leaders and/or visit various organizations and agencies which provide health and human services.
